WEDNESDAY MORNING, JUNE 22, 1859.

THE GERMANS IN NEW YORK. The two great places of rendezvous of our German population, on Sunday afternoons, are Jones's Wood and Conrad's Garden, on the East river. The first is a beautiful growth of native American forest trees, stretching from 3d and 2d Avenues to the East river, between 65th and 79th streets .--In the midst of this undulating and variegated grove, near the bank of the East river is a fine old mansion, with colonade piazzas, from which a fine view is had up and down the river, and of Blackwell's Island, opposite. The wooded area, of some 60 or 70 acres, contains almost every variety of trees, growing in a state of nature belonging to the American sylva. Among this noble growth may be seen three or four varieties of American oaks, fine wild poplars or tulip trees, (livdendron tulipfera,) at this season in full bloom; maple, beech, walnut, hickory, sweet gum, elm and other trees, besides smaller growth of dog wood, wild cherry, &c.

It is rare that such a splendid forest is seen within 30 or 40 minutes ride of the very heart and centre of the city, and approacha ble by two lines of city railroads, besides steamboats, which every Sunday convey to it Germans, and others, by tens of thousands .-They flock to the cool shades of this remarkable forest to breathe fresh air and regale themselves. On the river may be seen every variety of water craft, from the steamboats crowded with visitors down to the smallest sail or row boat.

There are any quantity of tables, beneath the spreading trees, seated at which, may be seen any quantity of men, women and children, drinking lager beer, and eating coarse rye bread and German cheese. Others are seen partaking of ice cream and cakes, while others, again, drink lemonade, while nearly all the adult males were smoking. German waiters were running in every direction, trays in hand, answering in German to German calls for refreshments. In one place was German music; in another, turnerverin, athleta, climbing posts and ropes, or turning somersets, like so many stalwart and giant-like baboons. In other places were dumb horses and carriages, driven forward in a circle inside of a platform, (propelled by a horse beneath,) on which men, women and children were riding at six cents each. In another place, men and boys were seen firing iron pointed missiles, guided by a strip of worsted, from a spring rifle gun, at a target, ten to twenty feet distant, at one cent a shot. In another place was seen men with scales ready to weigh customers, at one to two cents, for all sizes, each. In another part of the grounds, was seen a raised floor of planks, some seventy-five feet square, shaded by large trees, with raised seats at one side for musicians and spectators.-This is the dancing floor, for those wishing to engage in it on week day festivals. When the woods are illuminated at night with innumerable lamps, they give to all the scene a most striking effect. In another place was seen a bowling alley, at which some lusty young Germans were vigorously exercising their limbs. In another place, or in a small intervening green valley, between two slopes of hills, was a large circular enclosure, in which some half dozen or dozen saddled donkeys were to let, for a ride around the course of seventy-five to one hundred yards. The donkeys were kept at a stall in the centre. They were in eager requisition by both boys and girls, as well as now and then of a grown man, whose feet nearly touched the ground when astride them. The scenes that turned up between the obstinate donkeys and their awkward ri- G. A. SALT, (10 to ton,) ders, raised shouts of convulsive laughter, amidst a vast concourse of spectators. The donkeys would seem to be endowed with a sort was up, for when he thought that his rider had been sufficiently served, he would give unmistakable signs of an immoveable halt, and if the rider persisted in beating him to force him forward, he would suddenly kick out his heels from behind, throw his head down, and pitch his rider forward to the ground, when the most vociferous peals of laughter would proceed from the assembled crowd outside the course. On landing his rider on the ground, he would trot off to the centre to join his companions. Occasionally a race would be started between two donkey riders when instead of all the whipping and beating that could be applied, each donkey would instead of running, seem to be trying to see which could walk the slowest, to the great chagrin and disappointment of their ambitious riders. Now and then a donkey would get up steam and make a first-rate and rapid trot around the ring, while others could donkey riders. In another quarter, in a quiet green nook or corner, might be seen genteel German families quietly enjoying themselves, while their children were tumbling about over the green grass in playful moods. Such is Jones's Wood in New York on Sunday. Conrad Garden, on the East River, opposite 99th street, Yorkville, presents nearly similar scenes to those at Jones's Wood. The more religious portion of the city have appealed to the authorities to put a stop these Sunday amusements of our German population, which the latter have resisted, contending that they are innocent, and that they are the habits of "fatherland," which they have brought with them; and that this is, under the United States Constitution, a free country. They now enjoy themselves as usual, every Sunday, in their own way; and candor compels us to say, that however objectionable their Sabbath amusements may appear to Americans, although from 8,000 to 10,-(000 persons of all ages and sexes were on the ground last Sunday, the utmost good order prevailed. There was no drunkenness, no riots, no fights; and even an unprotected and properly behaved lady would have been just as safe from rudeness or insult, as though she were seated in a parlor in fifth avenue .-Opinions, however, differ on the subject of such a use of the Sabbath. But as the balf of Sunday is observed as holiday nearly all over the continent, and especially in the Catholic countries, the Germans can hardly be blamed for keeping up amusements on that day, which they have been educated to believe are not only inoffensive, but healthful. Elm Park, where the Turnverein Society and beating them on the hips and legs, which they received with every symptom of ill-will and resentment, expressed by an occasional kick in the rear. Nothing seemed to afford

so much merriment to great and small, as the elebrated their annual festival yesterday, is the Jancey estate belonging to the wife and children of Colonel Hermann Thorn to, which we referred on a former occasion.

Jones's wood belongs to the wealthy families of the Schermerhorns, and Jones inherited it through Kinckerbocker ancestors. The city, at one, time, proposed to purchase the beautiful Jones's wood for a Public Park. which would have formed one of the most primitive and enchanting character to be ound in the environs of any city in the world. But strange to say, the owners opposed it strenuously, and the city relinquished the project, and selected the bleak, rocky, poer soil and denuded ground, in the central portion and upper end of the Island, and laid it off into what is now known as the Central Park-to complete the improvements of which will require twenty years, at a cost of twenty millions of dollars; while the beautiful natu ral grove of Jones's wood is to be destroyed. Its fine trees of oak and chesnut, &c., are to be removed to make way for dusty streets, and avenues flanked with brick and mortar. Corr. of the Richmond Engr.

SOMBRERO GUANO.

In calling the attention of the public to this val-uable and recently discovered deposit of this fertilizing article, we will merely state, that like all other phosphatic GUANOS, its most valuable constituent is phosphoric acid, or bone phosphate of lime; and that its mercantile value, as compared with other GUANOS of its kind, may be easily determined by the amount of phosphoric acid or bone termined by the amount of phosphoric acid or bone phosphate of lime it contains. In order, therefore, to give the public a thorough knowledge of what SOMBRERO GUANO does contain, we beg to refer to the following list of eminent chemists in different parts of the world, who have analyzed different cargoes, from average samples taken by themselves from the cargoes just as they arrive from the island, without drying or selection of specimens for analyzation. Each analysis will be seen to contain the cargot of the contain the cargos of the contain the cargos of the contain the cargos of from the island, without drying or selection of specimens for analyzation. Each analysis will be exhibited, if required, under the original signature of each chemist named:
